I have heard you are reviewing the weekly commitment of traders report. I personally find this one of the best sources of market information available. If I were going to change anything it would be for the time between when you gather the information and when you distribute it, to be shortened. You report on Fridays the positions of traders as of the previous Tuesday. It seems to me that in the age of computers that this could be reported much faster. This report would be far more useful if what was reported on Friday was the positions as of Thursday. If the agency is able to make that improvement, I would further suggest that the long range plan might be to move to a daily report from the current weekly format.

Sincerely,
