To allow market participants anymore leverage would be a sin unless it is made public knowledge. As a floor broker for 18 years I have seen it all and I have never proclaimed my innocence although I have a perfect record to do so and since the electronic platform has taken over the trading I have seen only things that would raise my concerns on where these markets are going. Positions in my opinion are either smoke screens or are joint ventures between different funds that would hinder on collusion so to really answer the question no more latitude should be given to any of these bigger hedge funds to make money of the honest trader.
